

Annaliese Yukawa is a Policy Analyst at Mehlman Castagnetti Rosen & Thomas. In her role, she monitors Congressional activity, conducts research, and analyzes legislation and proposed regulations.

Previously, Yukawa worked with the firm serving as the Technology CEO Council's Eben Tisdale Fellow. During the fellowship, she attended Congressional hearings, created memos for stakeholders and researched workforce retraining programs for professionals affected by automation.

The unique environment of Silicon Valley, where she was raised, fostered her interest in the intersection between technology and public policy. During college, she worked at several startups and interned at the think tank TechFreedom, publishing weekly articles and recruiting guests for the organization's podcast. She also founded and chaired Westmont College's American Enterprise Institute (AEI) Executive Council.
